We all know about that fatherly love, the love that you could not get from anyone else. The love that says do what you want but I still care about you. People don't appreciate that love that a father gives. For example a father will let you go hangout with your friends because they love you and want you to have fun. We all know a mother also loves you but wants to keep you safe. You see, my relationship with my father is special because he gives good advice, he's really chilled out, and does not judge.

My father gives some good advice. For example he tells me how I should get a good education so then I can get the bag. The bag should be the first priority in life so him saying that makes me know that he got good advice. The second reason my father has good advice is that he told me not to have kids until I'm old. He told me that having kids stops your education, that ties in with chasing the bag so it's some good advice. The last example of my father having good advice is when he tells me to get a good education. Getting a good education ties in with chasing the bag so it's some good advice. My father has some very wise advice.

My father is a very chilled out person. One reason my father is a very chilled person is that my father gets frustrated a lot by my little brothers. My little brothers are always finding ways to frustrate everyone but my father stays calm and fixes the problem. Another reason why my father is a very chilled is that he sleeps allot. I'm talking bear hibernation type of sleep. Him sleeping so long makes him feel ehh about anything because he was in a calm state of mind. The last reason is that he couldn't care less, he can hear that I did not sleep for five whole days straight and he couldn't care less and just tell me to sleep. As you can see my father is just a very laid back kind of person.

My father is not a judgemental person. My first example of him not judging is that I watch cartoons. My mother tells me that I'm still a child but my father does not, he does not tease me like my mother. The second example is that I used to watch My Little Pony. My mother will tell everyone and laugh about it but my father didn't, he just went forward with his day. The last example that he doesn't judge is that I have a very "harsh" music taste. My songs are basically rapping about guns, money, people they killed and just criminal activity but he doesn't care and he just goes along with his day. As you can see my father does not judge.

My relationship with my father is something amazing for me. He has never judged me, he always gives me the best advice, and he is a cool person. The love he gives me cannot be given by any other person in this world. That's why my relationship with my father is something awesome for me.
